“ Ernest was one of the finest people I have ever known. He was always helping me with one of my cars and even my little motorcycle in my late high school and early college years. We shared the interest mechanics and in astronomy.

I was gone from Terrell working in California and Seattle for about forty years. When I returned we picked up our friendship again like I had never left.

He loved the car repair business. Being a mechanic and a shop manager was his whole life. Retiring was not what he wanted to do. He said, "you can only clean out the garage so many times". One day Ernest told me that when they dropped the atomic bomb on Japan it probably saved his life. On that day he was on board a ship headed for Japan with the invasion forces and probably would not have survived.

“ Ernest was the nicest guy and it was a pleasure to know and work with him. He was a fantastic mechanic; he could redo 2-3 transmissions in a day. May he Rest In Peace with the Lord.
