Frances spent her formative years in Hungerford, Texas, immersed in the vibrant life of the JD Hudgins Ranch, where she learned the value of hard work alongside her mother and grandmother. Her childhood was marked by her love for animals, participating in Girl Scouts, rodeo ribbon racing, and playing clarinet in the school band. She cherished moments spent with cousins and weekly family gatherings.

They married on June 10, 1961, at the Abell Street Church of Christ in Wharton. After completing her education in education, they lived in both Irving and Lubbock due to Ed's work with Humble Oil, ultimately returning to Hungerford in 1968 to work alongside her parents on the ranch. Together, Frances and Ed traveled the world representing the American Brahman Breeders Association, forging lifelong friendships along the way. In 1997, they founded Heritage Cattle Company, where Frances left her mark through her brand design, work ethic, and signature cookie creation. In 2012, Frances and Ed retired to Kaufman, where they continued their dedication to community and church at the Ola Church of Christ.

Frances' faith was a cornerstone of her life, radiating grace, love, and trust in God to all who knew her. Her warm smile and selfless spirit touched countless lives as she served as a Bible school teacher, community volunteer, and supportive partner in Ed's endeavors. Known for her culinary skills, Frances combined artistry with baking, crafting beautifully sculpted cakes that delighted family and friends alike.

Frances is preceded in death by her parents, Temple and Martha Koonce, her brother Temple Gordon Koonce, Jr., and sister-in-law Patricia Power Koonce.
